

A Shining Example of the Importance of Literacy!

XinJu Hippe, a long-time recipient of ABLE's services, received brailled learning materials throughout her middle school and high school years. When asked about the importance of ABLE's transcription services, XinJu offered the following:

"I am a writer: I write poetry, short stories, songs, but I never could've begun if I didn't know how to read. Without words we are extremely limited in how we express ourselves and how we can communicate, especially blind and visually impaired individuals who do not have body language to fall back on. Literacy opens the doors to educational and professional opportunities. It serves as a tool to promote dignity and independence."

In addition to being a university student and employee of Curriculum Associates, XinJu has been a dedicated Braille Games volunteer and serves on ABLE's Board of Directors.
